

Vo1.1, No.42, 18.12.68.

AND, because we have such a star-studded line up, we'll be starting at 7.00 sharp. WOE BETIDE ANY FOLK FAN WHO DOES NOT SHOW!

This week's film is a Czech film about young people living under the threat of this atom bomb century and the wartime horror of Europe that's the second World War, not 1968.

A lot of the film is shot on location around Czechoslovakia, and shows groups of young people together. As the film was made only a year or so ago, this alone makes for interesting viewing. Especially so when you think of the situation they are in now.

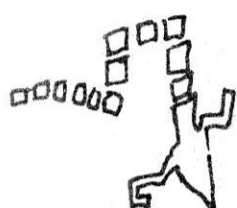

Essentially, the film sets out to show that despite the gloomy surface that presents itself, young people are still able to prove that there are some good yhings around.

The theme is worked out through the personal relationship between two young blokes and one bird. Or, "Who gets the bird?". Will she choose the plug-ugly, shy Matej; or will the handsome, confident Petr take the prize? Actually, it's not quite so nasty and vicious as it sounds. It's really a very lyrical and soft love story.

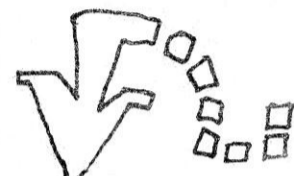

By the way, the title carries much the same meaning as the term "Chocolate Soldier". So now it's all crystal clear.

DISCUSSION?

That dangerous subversive element in our tranquil existence, commonly known as S.D.A. ^{are} is holding a conference during the week. A lot of the young people who ^{are} making all this news about demonstrations in Australia will be coming up to take courses on such subjects as "The Trade Unions and the New Radical Movement", "Communism and Anarchy". They are coming up to Foco on Sunday night and will kick off a general discussion on the youth politics and the place of radicals in the community. This should be a good opportunity for everyone to come along and ask questions or say your bit. Like we said for the serial, come along and hiss the hero and cheer the villian, or something.
